DEATH IS VERDICT IN STOESSEL TRIAL

ENDING OF CAREER OF DEFEATED RUSSIAN GENERAL AS RESULT OF COURT-MARTIAL.

RECOMMENDS COMMUTATION

Story of the Siege, Defense and Downfall of Port Arthur—Stoessel Appeals for Justice.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 20.—Lieut. Gen. Stoessel was condemned to death this evening by a military court for the surrender of Port Arthur to the Japanese.

Gen. Fock, who commanded the Fourth East Siberian Division of Port Arthur, was ordered reprimanded for a disciplinary offense, which was not connected with the surrender, and Gen. Smirnoff, acting commander of the fortress, and Major Gen. Reiss, chief of staff to Gen. Stoesel, were acquitted of the charges against them for lack of proof. The court recommended that the death sentence upon Lieut. Gen. Stoessel be commuted to ten years' imprisonment in a fortress and that he be excluded from the service.

Gen. Vodar, president of the court, read the sentences amid a tense silence.

By a great effort of self-control Gen. Stoessel maintained a rigid, soldierlike impassivity. Gen. Smirnoff also was seemingly unmoved, but there were tears in the eyes of Gen. Reiss.

The sentence of death was pronounced upon Gen. Stoessel "for surrendering the fortress before all the means of defense had been exhausted, for failing to enforce his authority and for military misdemeanors.

Commutation of the sentence was asked on the ground that "Port Arthus, beset by overwhelming forces, defended itself under Gen. Stoessel's leader ship with unexampled stubborness and filled the world with astonishment at the heroic courage of its garrison: that several assaults had been repulsed with tremendous losses on the part of the enemy; that Gen. Stoessel throughout the siege had maintained the heroic courage of the defenders, and, finally, that, he had taken energentic part in three campaigns."

Before the sentence was read measures were taken to prevent a demonstartion in favor of Gen. Stoessel by a number of the younger officers and witnesses who were present. These latter sent a dispatch to the empress saying that they would humbly bear testimony that Gen. Stoessel was the soul of defense of Port Arthur; that he had always encouraged and put heart into the garrison, and that in case of war they would wish to serve again under such a hero. They asked the Empress graciously to bespeak from the Emperor a full pardon.

There was a dramatic moment after the reading of the sentence, when a detachment of soldiers filed into the hall. The spectators, thinking that they were about to seize Gen. Stoessel displayed great excitement, several women fainting. It developed, however that this was merely a guard for the dispersal of the court.

Gen. Stoessel, who was accompanied by his son, was the object of a sympathetic demonstration, friends kissing and shaking him by the hand as he left the court leaning on his son's shoulder.

A public festival is being organized by the municipality of St. Petersburg in honor of the defenders of the fortress.

Petition Ready to Sign.

The petition to the governor in regular form has been prepared by City Attorney Holt and will be presented in a short time to the voters of Ada for their signature. If you want to see Ada a city of the first class you have a chance to take the first step to accomplish that end. So when the instrument is presented to you do not argue the question or delay the man who comes to you, but sign it, for the law has been amended so that it requires 25 per cent of the voters to authorize the issuance of the proclamation by the governor.

Eminent Divines Speak at the Methodist Church Tonight.

Dr. W. R. Lambuth, missionary secretary of the M. E. Church, South, and Dr. Jno. R. Nelson, home mission secretary are both here and will give a red hot interpretation of the laymen's movement and Dr. Lambuth who has just returned from a year's trip through Japan, China and Korea, will deliver a lecture on this trip. It will be full of information and teeming with interesting facts from beginning to end. It is indeed a rare opportunity to hear such a lecture and come face to face with a man who was born in China and was for years a missionary in that country and Japan.

He is a world figure and has a world vision. Would you look at the heathen lands and people through his eyes and understand the crying need of those countless millions? Then come tonight to the Methodist church and come early that you might get up close to the front. Don't fail to miss this the greatest treat the people of Ada have ever enjoyed. Admission free. Bring the boys and girls and come!

To Muskogee.

The following democrats left on the morning Katy for Muskogee, where they will attend the state democratic convention: C. C. Hargis, J. W. Bolen, E. H. Lucas, C. O. Barton, Sam Kerr, Judge Furman, Robt. Wimbish, Dr. Ligon, Sam McClure, I. M. King and Otis Weaver. Those from Rog were E. S. Kerr and C. H. Jones.

Tom D. McKeown active and favorable candidate for delegate to the national convention is already on the ground building his fences.

Let it not be understood that because both Jim Bolen and Dr. Ligon are in the delegation that there be two delegations as was the case two years ago, for the hatchet has been buried and the lion and the lamb are lying side by side.

Howard Parker, F. J. Etter and the Pontotoc county representatives at Guthrie, will join the delegation at Muskogee.

ARKANSAS DIAMONDS DISCUSSED.

New York, Feb. 20.—That real diamonds have been found in Arkansas was the statment made in a paper read by George E. Kunz of New York, one of the foremost American experts of precious stones, before the American Institute of Mining Engineers yesterday. Mr. Kunz stated that about 140 diamonds had been found near Murfreesboro, Ark., and that they were without doubt the genuine product of the country. He said:

"From the 200 carats available for examination, it appears that the Arkansas are comparing favorably with most of those in South Africa. Their average size is fairly large, though thus far none larger than 6.5 carats have been found. There is a large proportion of white stones for the most part of a high grade of brilliancy and free from flaws. Some of the yellow ones are of exceptional quality."

Negro Protests to Carnegie.

Guthrie, Ok., Feb. 20.—A negro preacher of Oklahoma City has written a letter to Andrew Carnegie, donator of the funds with which the Carnegie Library was built there, protesting against the proposition of white citizens to establish a "Jim Crow reading room in the $25,000 addition to the library now under construction. Mr. Carnegie also donated the funds for the addition. He also wrote to President Roosevelt and Booker T. Washington.

AT GUTHRIE

CITY INCORPORATION UP AND BILL MEETS APPROVAL.

BROOKS MEASURE SIGNED

Upper House Discusses at Length Waiving Right to Jury by Those Charged with Criminal Assault.

Guthrie, Ok., Feb. 20.—The governor today approved Senator Brooks' bill providing for the incorporation of cities of the first class which the House passed Tuesday; the concurrent resolution requesting the federal government to furnish to the state notes on the geological survey made in Oklahoma, and the records of surveys on the Five Civilized nations taken under authority of the Dames commission; the bill legalizing the contract between the county commissioners and the state in the leasing of the court house for a state administration building! and the bill for impaneling grand and petit jurors. All were senate meausures.

The senate had under consideration the bill by Senator Russell, fixing the penalty for criminal assault in the first degree at death or imprisonment for life, discretion to rest with the judge. Whether a prisoner should be allowed to waive the right to a jury was debated at length. Senator Brook told of some Indian Territory District Attorneys who had made it a habit of securing pleas of guilty from prisoners under the promise of lighter sentences whereas they were not guilty at all. Three states, according to Senator Roddie—Alabama, Tennessee and Kentucky—did not permit a prisoner to waive such right. The bill was sent to the legal committee for repair, after the objectional clause had been eliminated.

Another bill considered by the senate was by Senators Cordell and Johnson of Fort Cobb, providing for uniformity of marriages, and defining the manner of contracting the same. One section of the bill prevents marriage between whites and negroes. Ministers of the gospel before being permitted to perform marriage ceremonies are required to file an affidavit showing such authority, and an amendment was adopted that there should be no concealment of the marriage records from the public.

The senate adjourned without taking final action upon the bill.

To Protect Railway Employes.

The senate passed finally the bill by Senator Egerman for the protection of railroad employes compelled to enter fire boxes, steam boilers and smoke chambers, while the latter are under steam pressure.

In the house consideration was given the bill by Mr. Williams of Comanche County for a textbook board, to be composed of seven residents of the state, to select a uniform system of textbooks for the common schools. State Normal schools were excluded by an amendment. Mr. Ashby wanted the board reduced to five members and consist of a farmer, a lawyer, a doctor, a business man and a wage earner. Mr. Murray said that with seven opportunity for graft would be minimized. In the general discussion of the bill Mr. Murray stated that Oklahoma wanted books free from partisan color. He charged there were histories printed which promoted prejudice and taught the child of one section of the country to hate the child of another.

"We want books here which will tell the truth," said the speaker. "It would be of no use for a textbook to say that Schley did not win the battle of Santiago, for we all know that he did win it."

Mr. Ashby in defending his idea of a textbook board said that the common schools were the backbone of the country, and they graduated farmers. When a man goes to college, he said, he learns more about yells, football and boat racing than he does of things which are useful.

After making a majority of board teachers for three years in the common, tribal or governmental schools, and leaving the number at seven the bill went over until the next day.

The general appropriation bill carrying $407,206.45 was passed finally by the house with eleven adverse votes.

The new house bills today were:

My Mr. Casteel—For a tax of $50 per year per county upon traveling doctors or sellers of medicines.

By Mr. Durant—For inspection of commercial fertilizers, stock and poultry foods and concentrated stock foods, and taxing each brand sold in the state.

By Mr. Hobby—Authorizing combinations by persons on farm products raised by themselves.

A favorable committee report was made upon the Bryan pure food bill.

Petitions against the passage of Senator Williams' pharmaceutical bill continue to arrive, notwithstanding the bill has been indefinitely postponed. Senator Billups presented 148 petitions against it today.

A Success.

The Grand Leader building was filled almost to overflowing Thursday evening on account the recital by Mrs. Bras of Roff, and considerable home talent. The occasion was a pronounced success. Everybody says so. The numbers, vocal, instrumental and literary were high class and were enjoyed immensely by the large audience. All participants deserve commendation and the intelligent audience did not at any time fail to show appreciation of the deserving talent. The vocal renditions by Mrs. McCall especially brought hearty applause from the house.

WM A. RADFORD EDITOR

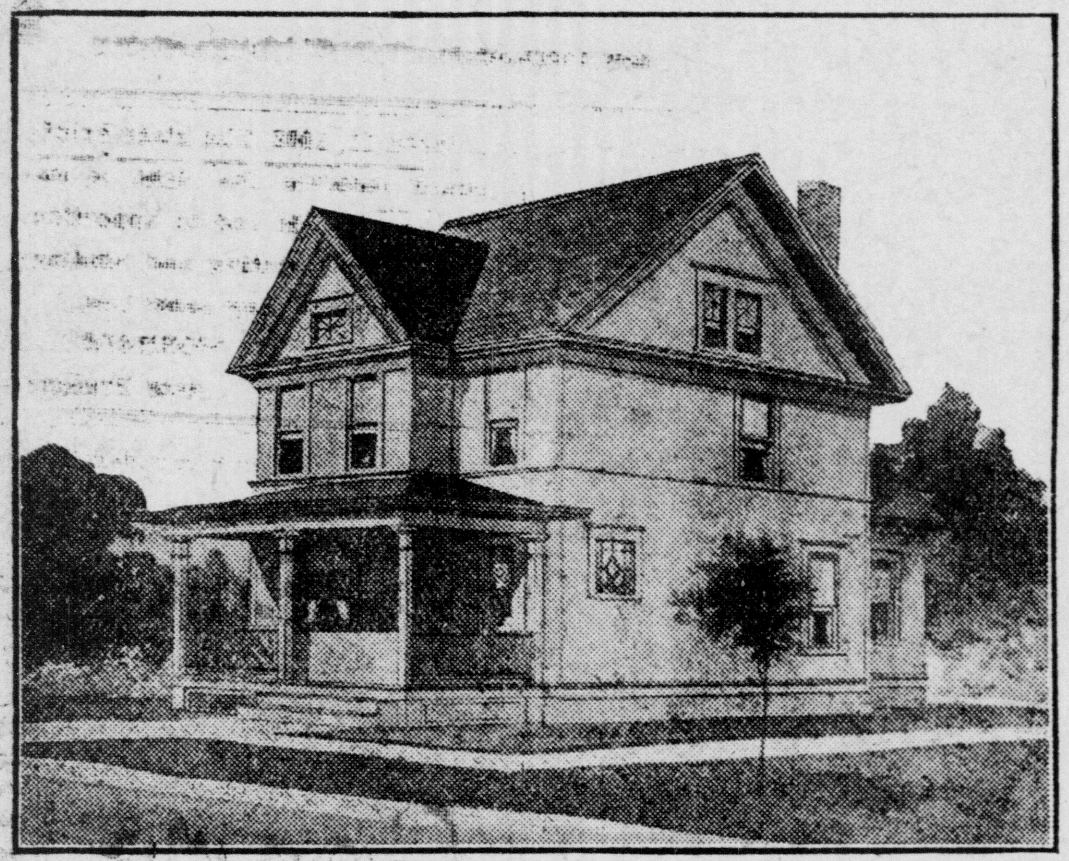
Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 194 Fifth Ave., Chicago, Ill., and only enclose two-cent stamp for reply.

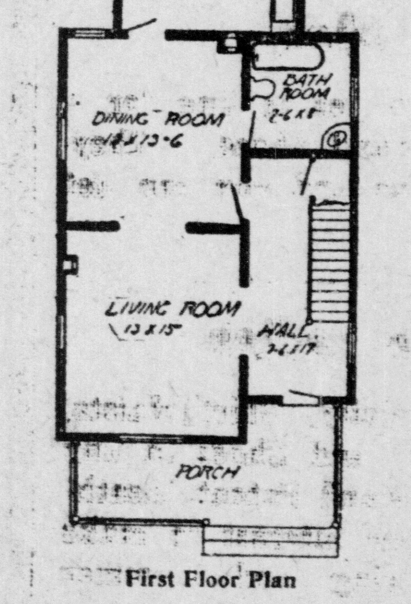
This is one of the best low-cost houses ever built. It is medium in size as well as price, a sort of compromise between the large house, large rooms and high ceilings of 20 or 30 years ago and the little narrow, contracted, close communion affairs that are being built now in order to save expense because of the high price of all building materials.

The size on the ground is 26¾ feet in width by 44½ feet long, which is six or eight feet longer than most new city houses that are built on this general plan.

There are fashions in houses, the same as in other things. Some of the old fashions are all right, but some are nothing but silly fads. One of these late fashions is the dining-room extension which is built something after the fashion of a bay window, but it is very much wider and it has square corners. Sometimes these extensions have windows in the ends, but in such cases have the appearance of being overdone. Such an addition to a dining-room is intended to let in an abundance of light as well as to add to the appearance of the room, and is one of the most commendable new building features. It never fails to add an air of elegance and refinement when the proportions are right and the work properly done.

In some of these extensions the windows are placed high up, but there is an advantage in the deep window, especially if you want to use the space for a window seat. When the windows come down a wide seat may be built just a little below the window stools, which, if carefully upholstered, makes a very pleasant lounging place both in winter and summer. These extensions must be very carefully built and thoroughly papered, and the paper must be very carefully put on so as not to leave any cracks for the wind to blow through. Where you have so much glass surface the radiation of heat goes on very rapidly. For comfort in using such a window seat a little careful, systematic attention when building is especially valuable.

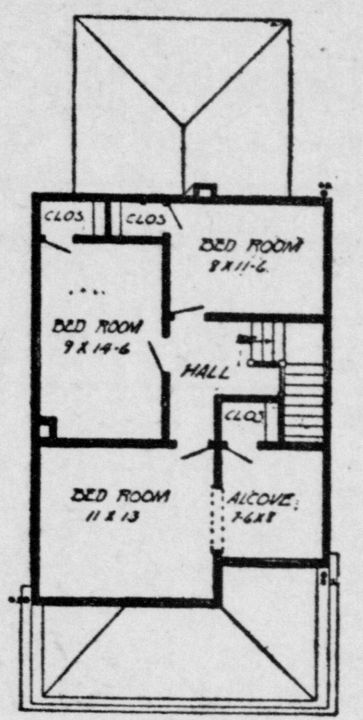




First Floor Plan

You would hunt a long time before finding another such a dining-room in a low-cost house. The room is 12 by 13½ feet, but is larger than the size indicates because of the large china closet and the extra large pantry, where a great many things that are commonly kept in the dining-room will find more convenient places. In fact, it is not absolutely necessary to have a sideboard in this dining-room. Of course a sideboard looks well in any dining-room, and if you want it, there is room between the two doors or on the side against the kitchen.

The use of a dining-room in a house like this depends very much on how the living room is furnished. Living rooms are used for general purposes more than ever before; so much so that the word parlor has almost gone out of use in some sections of the country. But there are women yet who want a parlor or a living room so elaborately furnished that no one feels comfortable. It is in just such houses that the more ordinary dining-room comes in for a great deal of solid family enjoyment, and that is one reason why a good, comfortable window seat in this dining-room projection would be appreciated. The fireplace being opposite the big window, makes a combination that for convenience and luxurious comfort is hard to beat.



Second Floor Plan

One great advantage in this house is the large central chimney. A chimney like this is worth a great deal in a dwelling. There are four flues, one for the furnace, one for the kitchen range and one for each grate, and these grate flues are ventilators of the very best possible type. They are at work night and day carrying out the foul air that is so objectionable in many houses. Ventilation will receive more attention as the scientific treatment of tuberculosis and pneumonia becomes better understood. These diseases are caused by lack of fresh air, and they are cured, if cured at all, by causing the patients to breathe abundantly of air that comes directly from outdoors. Sometimes severe cases have been cured by leaving the window in the sleeping room open day and night. When people get to understand the value of fresh air we will have better ventilated houses. In the meantime, if we can smuggle in a couple of extra flues like this we may be able to save some lives without anybody knowing it.

The front hall is not larger than necessary. It is shut off from outdoors by a vestibule with double doors so it may be kept warm. Each bedroom has two clothes closets, something that is unusual in any house, but an improvement that will be appreciated.

Another splendid feature is the size of the bath room. One important consideration in arranging a bath room is to have it over or near the kitchen, so the same pipes that supply water to the tub and wash stand will supply the kitchen sink, and the same rule works right in regard to the waste pipes. It not only effects a saving in first cost, but it is better for several reasons. The shorter the pipes are the better they will work, and the more condensed the space the easier they are kept from freezing in the winter time.

The kitchen is large enough, and it is both light and airy because of the windows on the side and the door in the end, and this door opens onto a very comfortable back porch that may be easily screened from flies and mosquitoes.

It is estimated that this house can be built where conditions are all favorable for about $2,000 without heater, plumbing, mantel or lighting fixtures.

Laugh and Be Glad.

Italian proverb: Laughter makes good blood.

NO RULE TO GUIDE

OFFICIAL TITLES A DIFFICULTY FOR THE UNINITIATED.

Changes Made in the Forms of Addressing the President and Others in High Position—"Congressman" Not Used.

"Should I address him as 'Your Excellency,' as 'Mr. President' or as just 'President'?"

"I'm sure I don't know. Just murmur 'President,' and I guess he won't know the difference."

This conversation, overheard at one of the White House receptions, is indicative of the difficulty with titles encountered by visitors to the national capital. Nor is there any printed guide to follow. These things must be learned from well-posted friends, or mistakes will be made.

In ye olden times no one ever thought of addressing the chief executive of the United States less formally than as "Your Excellency," but that expression is now relegated to the list of things that were. "Mr. President" is the correct form, both in speaking and writing. Mr. Roosevelt has even eliminated "The Executive Mansion" as the name of the president's official residence, and his stationery bears the simple inscription: "The White House."

It is not only with the title of the chief executive that the uninitiated find difficulty, for there are many forms to be learned. For instance, cabinet officers are not addressed as "Secretary Root," or "Secretary Garfield," but as "Mr. Secretary." On the other hand, senators are addressed by their titles, as "Senator Lodge," "Senator Hale." A few people prefix "Mr." saying "Mr. Senator," but it is not considered as necessary, and by some is pronounced an affectation.

Polite usage requires, invariably, the prefix to the titles of members of the supreme court. For instance, one addresses the chief justice as "Mr. Chief Justice," and the associate justices as "Mr. Justice," although in making an introduction one would add the name, as: "Mr. Justice White."

The rule which applies to the president applies also to the vice-president and to foreign ministers, who are addressed as "Mr. Minister," but in the case of ambassadors the form "Your Excellency," is used except where one is reasonably well acquainted, when the simpler "Mr. Ambassador" is adopted, and in every instance one or the other of these terms is used instead of the diplomat's personal title of baron, count, or whatever it may be.

Throughout the government service there are officials who are addressed by their titles with the prefix "Mr.," such as the civil service commissioners, the interstate commerce commissioners, the controller of the treasury, and it is always safe when in doubt to so address a man who holds a public office.

With members of the house the simple "Mr." should be used, and not "Congressman," which is regarded as provincial, despite the fact that President Roosevelt is apt to use that form. There are some members of the lower house of congress who like to be addressed as "Congressman," and it is probably in deference to such preference that the president has adopted that expression. The speaker of the house is always addressed as "Mr. Speaker."

Army and navy circles also present no little confusion because of the conflict between official titles and social usage. For instance, those who know never address socially a lieutenant by his title, despite the fact that he is so designated in the army register, and is so addressed by his brother officer when on official business. He is simply "Mr. Smith," or whatever his name may be, and receives his title in the social world only when he reaches the grade of captain. But, you may object, every one refers to and addresses the leader of the Marine Band as "Lieutenant Santelmann." Very true, and that is because Lieutenant Santelmann is not a commissioned officer. He receives the title by virtue of his position as leader of the Marine Band, which carries with it the rank of lieutenant, and therefore every officer, whether speaking socially or officially, is punctilious to use the title. And so, too, is the same care exercised by every officer, should he have occasion socially to speak to or communicate with an enlisted man of any arm of the military service, to address him by his rank alone, as: "Sergeant," "Corporal," "Private."

Cat with Knowledge of Music.

At a meeting of a Washington short story club the other evening a young woman from the northeast section, whose mind is said to run to innovations, produced from her handbag a roll of manuscript written on the daintiest of ecru-tinted paper delicately perfumed with violet, and read her literary offering. It proved to be an account of the wonderful doings of her pet pussy cat, "Sweet Pea," as she had named the animal. She read how she had trained the cat to sing "Auld Lang Syne," "Annie Laurie" and other venerable airs in the high falsetto voice for which the feline family is noted. Then the young woman related how, in the balmy summer nights, in the romantic moonlight, her pet cat would station itself on some neighboring fence and suddenly fill the neighborhood with strains of music instead of the usual caterwauling that is produced by marauding pussy cats and Toms.

FOUND OUT THE TROUBLE.

Waitress Discovered Jimmy's Peculiarity in Making Change.

Cash registers are doubtless watchdogs of private treasuries and joys forever to the happy clerks who play lightly upon the keys to "register the amount of your purchase," but there may come times in the best-regulated establishments when the vagaries of the human factor, without which the machine will not go, mix up its internal anatomy so that chaos reigns.

In a Washington restaurant where tourists gather to snatch a passing bite between seeing sights and complain that the public buildings do not open until nine o'clock, thus compelling them to confine their observations to banking hours, a deep mystery has brooded for days. There was a wide discrepancy between the receipts as stamped upon the roll in the cash register, and the amount of money found in the drawer at the close of business each day.

For a long time no solution of the puzzle could be found. A young man, whose chief characteristic was his willingness, opened the restaurant at six every morning and ruled the roost alone. But he was known to be honest.

At last one of the waitresses, who arrived one morning just as the lonely young man was making change for one of the early customers, found out what was the matter.

"Jimmy, your head is full of mud," was her classic adjuration. "What on earth are you doing?"

"Making the change," replied the unperturbed James.

And then the secret was out. Jimmy, when he received a bank note or coin to change, rang up that amount on the register, without reference to what the customer was to pay, and let it go at that. It was as simple as could be.

Jimmy is still puzzling over the matter, for he knows that he put into the drawer the exact sum that he rang up, every time, so he cannot see where the kick comes in.

No One to "Sit on the Lid."

"Usually, when the president goes away from the national capital for any length of time," remarked a stay-at-home official to a Washington star reporter, "he designates some member of the cabinet to 'sit on the lid,' or, in other words, to represent him in Washington in case of necessity. That duty usually has been delegated to either Secretary Root or Secretary Taft, but has sometimes been assumed by other members of the cabinet. For some unexplained reason it was not done this year, and it has happened that the highest official of the government on duty in the national capital for weeks at a time during the summer has been an assistant secretary to one of the executive departments.

"In the past it was extremely unusual for the president and all the members of his cabinet to be away from Washington at the same time for any extended period, but that condition existed, and has occurred frequently since the president went to Oyster Bay early in June last. Neither Secretary Root, Secretary Taft nor any other member of the cabinet has been in Washington for any considerable stretch of time since that date, and it has happened that all of them have been away at the same time. No embarrassment has resulted, however, as the president as well as all the cabinet ministers have remained in close communication with their representatives who remain in Washington throughout the summer, regardless of where they happened to be, so that really there was no occasion for anyone to hold down the lid for the president during the summer."

Supreme Court Enjoyed Joke.

It is not safe for the average citizen to take liberties with the United States supreme court, but they have fun with each other, these grave and reverend dignitaries of the woolsack. The other day a case was pending in which a homesteader claimed damages against a railroad for the occupation of certain land. It was pretty plain that the homesteader had waited ten years or so to claim his damages in order that the land might increase in value and permit him to make his claim larger. "Do you think it is equitable and just?' demanded Justice Brewer of the claimant's lawyer, "for your client to demand $1,000 from the railroad for this land when your client acquired the same by paying the merely nominal fees of a few dollars assessed by the government?" "But, if your honor please," retorted the lawyer, "the railroad paid nothing at all." "Ha, ha," laughed Justice Harlan, in a lusty voice, and then he deliberately leaned forward and grinned at Brewer. And Brewer grinned, too, at his own discomfiture. Harlan will be 75 next June. Two of his passions are golf and chewing tobacco.

No Time to Get Full Name.

Some of the new members of congress were getting acquainted with Washington society at the president's diplomatic reception. Representative Edwards of Georgia was introduced to Mr. Jonkheer Reinhardt de Marees van Swinderen. Representative Willets of New York came up and Mr. Edwards wanted to introduce him. "Would you mind giving me your name, sir? I could not hear it distinctly in this noise," said he to the minister from the Netherlands. "Jonkheer Reinhardt de—" Both Mr. Edwards and Mr. Willets were listening intently, but as it was a fast moving reception they did not get any more, nor did they see the minister any more.

WOMAN'S REALM

NEW SMALL TOQUE

IS TAKING THE PLACE OF THE VERY LARGE HAT.

Innovation of Fashion Will Be Welcomed by Many—Velvet Much Used in the Makeup of These Becoming Creations.

The New Toque.

The very large hat is no longer dominating the millinery situation as it was several weeks ago. The small hat of fur or velvet has now come upon the scene and is again considered proper for many occasions when the large hat is both uncomfortable and inappropriate. This innovation of fashion has brought infinite relief to numbers of women to whom the large hat was extremely unbecoming. Among these women who are not tall in proportion to their breadth of shoulder suffered most. The large hats which fashion forced upon everybody at the beginning of the season made these women look shorter than ever and were in many ways most distressing.

Especially are the small velvet toques enjoying a recurrence of popularity. They are exceedingly trig and becoming to most women. They are made in velvet to match velvet or broadcloth costumes. There is invariably a high trimming at the side, which greatly adds to the style of the toque. This high trimming is preferably not heavy, but is composed of aigrettes or some other light feather ornaments. Velvet is also used in loops having unfinished edges to make this high trimming. On many of these velvet toques there is a touch of gold in embroidery on the crown, or gold twisted cord with the velvet around the sides.

Negliges Made from Remnants.

The filmiest, loveliest kind of neglige may be fashioned at home at a quarter the price asked for the finished article in the store just now, when remnants of dainty fabrics are to be picked up at reduced prices. A length insufficient for a gown is enough for a neglige and the work of construction is quite simple.

The yoke and wide, long kimono sleeves could be in one piece fashioned from the material, first pintucked, then barred with narrow insertion, supporting an accordion-plaited body, trimmed or plain on the bottom.

Messaline, India or marquisette could be used, and a raid on the ribbon remnant box will reveal pretty strands providing a finish.

BROADCLOTH NOW MUCH WORN.

French Dressmakers Use Remarkable Association of Colors.

Broadcloth is woven so delightfully that it is becoming more and more an all-the-year-round fabric. With the ascending vogue of the tunic, chiffon broadcloth promises to be in greater demand that ever, and forms the foundation for some remarkable color schemes with satin moire, mervellieux and chiffon taffetas, the other fabrics being used as borders and deep facings. Time was when one would have stood aghast even at the thought of a combination of mauve and red, yet the French dressmakers associate them, and the color opportunities of the day are so great that one is fain to grant the medley the verdict of chic.

Armand displays a remarkable creation in pinkish mauve chiffon broadcloth, showing the circular skirt faced with a deep band of rich, dark red satin moire, cut in scallops at the top. The points of the scallops are far enough distant to permit the trespass of handsome silk soutache braid put on in decorative design.

CURLING THE BABY'S HAIR.

Brush Upward Instead of Downward, Is Good Rule to Adopt.

Where is the fond young mamma who doesn't hope and pray that her baby's hair will curl? It's fatal to any hope of good looks for the youngster to really curl it, but old nurses have a trick of inducing a soft curl on even the straightest little heads of hair. They do it by brushing against the grain.

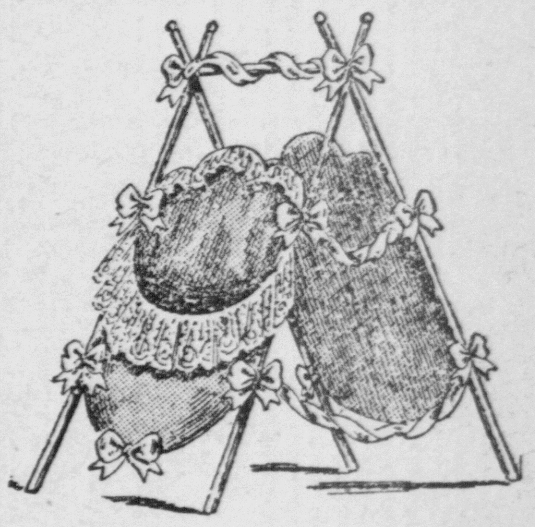
A baby's hair should always be brushed upward instead of downward, and as each lock is treated it should be given a little twist with the finger, this operation having particularly good and lasting effect when the hair is damp.

Persevered in daily, this will be found to work wonders, even in cases where the natural growth was perfectly straight, although for the first week or two before the hair has become accustomed to the upward trend the effect is rather wild.

NEAT LITTLE TOILET TIDY.

Dainty Trifle of Real Value for the Dressing Table.

We give a sketch of a pretty little toilet tidy for standing on the dressing table, that can easily be made by clever fingers. It consists of a framework of slender sticks of wood tied together with ribbons where they cross. Into the upper ends of the sticks pins with ornamental heads are run in to finish them off. The two pockets are made quite separately, and tied in their places with ribbons. The back portion of the pockets should be cut out in cardboard in the shape shown, and covered with some pretty light material, the upper part and the edge of the pocket being trimmed with lace. Little festoons of ribbon on either side prevent the framework from opening too far, and the sticks themselves will look bright and pretty if they are covered all over with gold paint. The tidy when completed should be about six or seven inches in height.



BLUE WITH BLACK CHECK.

One of the new cloths in blue with a black distinct check is used for this suit. The trimming bands are plain blue, finished with blue velvet tabs and black silk tassels. The straps on the skirt extend over the shoulders and there is a folded velvet girdle with a large gilt buckle. All of it makes a striking effect.

Brace for Round Shoulders.

The simplest and probably the best shoulder brace is made of two loops of webbing connected with a straight piece of the same material. The arms slip through the loops and the straight piece passes across the back. The brace simply serves as a reminder of the stooping position and does not claim to hold one up. The feeling of energy and self-respect is better than any brace.

Lack of energy is shown plainly in the carriage. There is something wrong with the mental attitude of a girl who allows her shoulders to droop. Round shoulders are more often due to indifference to one's appearance than to weakness or hard labor. The best way to correct the habit of stooping over is to straighten up every time you think of it, no matter how tired you may be.

The Empire Slant.

The empire influence is still perceptible in the shortening of the waist line at the back of many of the newest coat models, but on the whole the square stole lines that suggest the garments of ecclesiastical dignitaries are in the lead, and their flatness of effect is relieved by trimmings of braids and cords disposed in an endless variety of ways. Usually a wide braid emphasizes the lines of the garment and the narrower braids or cordings make the various curlycues.

CITY INCORPORATION UP AND BILL MEETS APPROVAL.

BROOKS MEASURE SIGNED

Upper House Discusses at Length Waiving Right to Jury by Those Charged with Criminal Assault.

Guthrie, Ok., Feb 20.—The governor today approved Senator Brooks' bill providing for the incorporation of cities of the first class which the House passed Tuesday; the concurrent resolution requesting the federal government to furnish to the state notes on the geological survey made in Oklahoma, and the records of surveys on the Five Civilized nations taken under authority of the Dawes commission: the bill legalizing the contract between the county commissioners and the state in the leasing of the court house for a state administration building! and the bill for impaneling grand and petit jurors. All were senate measures.

The senate had under consideration the bill by Senator Russell, fixing the penalty for criminal assault in the first degree at death or imprisonment for life, discretion to rest with the judge. Whether a prisoner should be allowed to waive the right to a jury was debated at length. Senator Brook told of some Indian Territory District Attorneys who had made it a habit of securing pleas of guilty from prisoners under the promise of lighter sentences whereas they were not guilty at all. Three states, according to Senator Roddie—Alabama, Tennessee and Kentucky—did not permit a prisoner to waive such right. The bill was sent to the legal committee for repair, after the objectional clause had been eliminated.

Another bill considered by the senate was by Senators Cordell and Johnson of Fort Cobb, providing for uniformity of marriages, and defining the manner of contracting the same. One section of the bill prevents marriage between whites and negroes. Ministers of the gospel before being permitted to perform marriage ceremonies are required to file an affidavit showing such authority, and an amendment was adopted that there should be no concealment of the marriage records from the public.

The senate adjourned without taking final action upon the bill.

To Protect Railway Employes.

The senate passed finally the bill by Senator Egerman for the protection of railroad employes compelled to enter fire boxes, steam boilers and smoke chambers, while the latter are under steam pressure.

In the house consideration was given the bill by Mr. Williams of Comanche County for a textbook board, to be composed of seven residents of the state, to select a uniform system of textbooks for the common schools. State Normal schools were excluded by an amendment. Mr. Ashby wanted the board reduced to five members and consist of a farmer, a lawyer, a doctor, a business man and a wage earner. Mr. Murray said that with seven opportunity for graft would be minimized. In the general discussion of the bill Mr. Murray stated that Oklahoma wanted books free from partisan color. He charged there were histories printed which promoted prejudice and taught the child of one section of the country to hate the child of another.

"We want books here which will tell the truth," said the speaker. "It would be of no use for a textbook to say that Seale did not win the battle of Sartugo, for we all know that he did win it."

Mr. Ashby in defending his idea of a textbook board said that the common schools were the backbone of the country, and they graduated farmers. When a man goes to college he said, he learns more about [illegible] football and boat racing than he does of things which are useful.

After making a majority of male teachers for three years in the common, tribal or governmental schools, and leaving the number at seven the bill went over until the next day.

The general appropriation bill carrying $107,206.45 was passed finally by the house with eleven adverse votes.

The new house bills today were:

My Mr. Caswell—For a tax of $50 per year per county upon traveling doctors or sellers of medicines.

By Mr Durant—For inspection of commercial fertilizers, stock and poultry foods and concentrated stock foods, and taxing each brand sold in the state.

By Mr. Hubby—Authorizing combinations by persons on farm products raised by themselves.

A favorable committee report was made upon the Bryan pure food bill.

Petitions against the passage of Senator Williams' pharmaceutical bill continue to arrive notwithstanding the bill has been indefinitely postponed. Senator Billups presented 118 petitions against it today.

Everybody says so. The numbers, vocal, instrumental and literary were high class and were enjoyed immensely by the large audience. All participants deserve commendation and the intelligent audience did not at any time fail to show appreciation of the deserving talent. The vocal renditions by Mrs. McCall especially brought hearty applause from the house.

CITY INCORPORATION UP AND BILL MEETS APPROVAL.

BROOKS MEASURE SIGNED

Upper House Discusses at Length Waiving Right to Jury by Those Charged with Criminal Assault.

Guthrie, Ok., Feb 20 -The governor today approved Senator Brooks' bill providing for the incorporation of cities of the first class which the House passed Tuesday; the concurrent resolution requesting the federal government to furnish to the state notes on the geological survey made in Oklahoma, and the records of surveys on the Five Civilized nations taken under authority of the Dawes commission: the bill legalizing the contract between the county commissioners and the state in the leasing of the court house for a state administration building! and the bill for impaneling grand and petit jurors All were senate meausures

The senate had under consideration the bill by Senator Russell, fixing the penalty for criminal assault in the first degree at death or imprisonment for life, discretion to rest with the judge Whether a prisoner should be allowed to waive the right to a jury was debated at length. Senator Brook told of some Indian Territory District Attorneys who had made it a habit of securing pleas of guilty from prisoners under the promise of lighter sentence, whereas they were not guilty at all Three states, according to Senator Roddie—Alabama, Tennessee and Kentucky—did not permit a prisoner to waive such right. The bill was sent to the legal committee for repair, after the objectional clause had been eliminated.

Another bill considered by the senate was by Senators Cordell and Johnson of Fort Cobb, providing for uniformity of marriages, and defining the manner of contracting the same. One section of the bill prevents marriage between whites and negroes. Ministers of the gospel before being permitted to perform marriage ceremonies are required to file an affidavit showing such authority, and an amendment was adopted that there should be no concealment of the marriage records from the public.

The senate adjourned without taking final action upon the bill

To Protect Railway Employes.

The senate passed finally the bill by Senator Egerman for the protection of railroad employes compelled to enter fire boxes, steam boilers and smoke chambers, while the latter are under steam pressure.

In the house consideration was given the bill by Mr. Williams of Comanche County for a textbook board, to be composed of seven residents of the state, to select a uniform system of textbooks for the common schools State Normal schools were excluded by an amendment. Mr. Ashby wanted the board reduced to five members and consist of a farmer, a lawyer, a doctor, a business man and a wage earner. Mr. Murray said that with seven opportunity for graft would be minimized In the general discussion of the bill Mr. Murray stated that Oklahoma wanted books free from partisan color He charged there were histories printed which promoted prejudice and taught the child of one section of the country to hate the child of another

"We want books here which will tell the truth," said the speaker. "It would be of no use for a textbook to say that Schley did not win the battle of Santiago, for we all know that he did win it."

Mr Ashby in defending his idea of a textbook board said that the common schools were the backbone of the country, and they graduated farmers. When a man goes to college he said, he learns more about [illegible] football and boat racing than he does of things which are useful.

After making a majority of board teachers for three years in the common, tribal or governmental schools, and leaving the number at seven the bill went over until the next day

The general appropriation bill carrying $187,206.45 was passed finally by the house with eleven adverse votes

The new house bills today were:

By Mr Castell—For a tax of $50 per year per county upon traveling doctors or sellers of medicines

By Mr Durant—For inspection of commercial fertilizers, stock and poultry foods and concentrated stock foods, and taxing each brand sold in the state.

By Mr. Hobby—Authorizing combinations by persons on farm products raised by themselves

A favorable committee report was made upon the Bryan pure food bill

Petitions against the passage of Senator Williams' pharmaceutical bill continue to arrive notwithstanding the bill has been indefinitely postponed. Senator Billups presented 148 petitions against it today

All participants deserve commendation and the intelligent audience did not at any time fail to show appreciation of the deserving talent The vocal renditions by Mrs McCall especially brought hearty applause from the house

WM A. RADFORD EDITOR

Mr. William A Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building for the readers of this paper On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects Address all inquiries to William A Radford, No. 194 Fifth Ave, Chicago, Ill, and only enclose two-cent stamp for reply

This is one of the best low-cost houses ever built. It is medium in size as well as price, a sort of compromise between the large house, large rooms and high ceilings of 20 or 30 years ago and the little, narrow, contracted, close communion affairs that are being built now in order to save expense because of the high price of all building materials

The size on the ground is 26¾ feet in width by 44½ feet long, which is six or eight feet longer than most new city houses that are built on this general plan.

There are fashions in houses, the same as in other things Some of the old fashions are all right, but some are nothing but silly fads. One of these late fashions is the dining-room extension which is built something after the fashion of a bay window, but it is very much wider and it has square corners Sometimes these extensions have windows in the ends, but in such cases have the appearance of being overdone. Such an addition to a dining-room is intended to let in an abundance of light as well as to add to the appearance of the room, and is one of the most commendable new building features It never fails to add an air of elegance and refinement when the proportions are right and the work properly done.

In some of these extensions the windows are placed high up, but there is an advantage in the deep window, especially if you want to use the space for a window seat When the windows come down a wide seat may be built just a little below the window stools, which, if carefully upholstered, makes a very pleasant lounging place both in winter and summer. These extensions must be very carefully built and thoroughly papered, and the paper must be very carefully put on so as not to leave any cracks for the wind to blow through. Where you have so much glass surface the radiation of heat goes on very rapidly. For comfort in using such a window seat a little careful, systematic attention when building is especially valuable

You would hunt a long time before finding another such a dining-room in a low-cost house. The room is 12 by 13½ feet, but is larger than the size indicates because of the large china closet and the extra large pantry, where a great many things that are commonly kept in the dining-room will find more convenient places. In fact, it is not absolutely necessary to have a sideboard in this dining-room. Of course a sideboard looks well in any dining-room, and if you want it, there is room between the two doors or on the side against the kitchen.

The use of a dining-room in a house like this depends very much on how the living room is furnished. Living rooms are used for general purposes more than ever before; so much so that the word parlor has almost gone out of use in some sections of the country. But there are women yet who want a parlor or a living room so elaborately furnished that no one feels comfortable. It is in just such houses that the more ordinary dining-room comes in for a great deal of solid family enjoyment, and that is one reason why a good, comfortable window seat in this dining-room projection would be appreciated. The fireplace being opposite the big window, makes a combination that for convenience and luxurious comfort is hard to beat

One great advantage in this house is the large central chimney A chimney like this is worth a great deal in a dwelling There are four flues, one for the furnace, one for the kitchen range and one for each grate, and these grate flues are ventilators of the very best possible type They are at work night and day carrying out the foul air that is so objectionable in many houses Ventilation will receive more attention as the scientific treatment of tuberculosis and pneumonia becomes better understood. These diseases are caused by lack of fresh air, and they are cured, if cured at all, by causing the patients to breathe abundantly of air that comes directly from outdoors Sometimes severe cases have been cured by leaving the window in the sleeping room open day and night When people get to understand the value of fresh air we will have better ventilated houses. In the meantime, if we can smuggle in a couple of extra flues like this we may be able to save some lives without anybody knowing it.

The front hall is not larger than necessary It is shut off from out doors by a vestibule with double doors so it may be kept warm. Each bedroom has two clothes closets, something that is unusual in any house, but an improvement that will be appreciated.

Another splendid feature is the size of the bath room. One important consideration in arranging a bath room is to have it over or near the kitchen, so the same pipes that supply water to the tub and wash stand will supply the kitchen sink, and the same rule works right in regard to the waste pipes It not only effects a saving in first cost, but it is better for several reasons. The shorter the pipes are the better they will work, and the more condensed the space the easier they are kept from freezing in the winter time.

The kitchen is large enough, and it is both light and airy because of the windows on the side and the door in the end, and this door opens onto a very comfortable back porch that may be easily screened from flies and mosquitoes.

It is estimated that this house can be built where conditions are all favorable for about $2,000 without heater, plumbing, mantel or lighting fixtures.

Laugh and Be Glad.

Italian proverb: Laughter makes good blood.

NO RULE TO GUIDE

OFFICIAL TITLES A DIFFICULTY FOR THE UNINITIATED.

Changes Made in the Forms of Addressing the President and Others in High Position—"Congressman" Not Used.

"Should I address him as 'Your Excellency,' as 'Mr President' or as just 'President'?"

"I'm sure I don't know Just murmur 'President,' and I guess he won't know the difference"

This conversation, overheard at one of the White House receptions, is indicative of the difficulty with titles encountered by visitors to the national capital. Nor is there any printed guide to follow. These things must be learned from well-posted friends, or mistakes will be made

In ye olden times no one ever thought of addressing the chief executive of the United States less formally than as "Your Excellency," but that expression is now relegated to the list of things that were. "Mr President" is the correct form, both in speaking and writing. Mr. Roosevelt has even eliminated "The Executive Mansion" as the name of the president's official residence, and his stationery bears the simple inscription. "The White House"

It is not only with the title of the chief executive that the uninitiated find difficulty, for there are many forms to be learned. For instance, cabinet officers are not addressed as "Secretary Root," or "Secretary Garfield," but as "Mr. Secretary" On the other hand, senators are addressed by their titles, as "Senator Lodge," "Senator Hale" A few people prefix "Mr" saying "Mr Senator," but it is not considered as necessary, and by some is pronounced an affectation.

Polite usage requires, invariably, the prefix to the titles of members of the supreme court For instance, one addresses the chief justice as "Mr. Chief Justice," and the associate justices as "Mr Justice," although in making an introduction one would add the name, as: "Mr. Justice White"

The rule which applies to the president applies also to the vice-president and to foreign ministers, who are addressed as "Mr Minister," but in the case of ambassadors the form "Your Excellency," is used except where one is reasonably well acquainted, when the simpler "Mr Ambassador" is adopted, and in every instance one or the other of these terms is used instead of the diplomat's personal title of baron, count, or whatever it may be

Throughout the government service there are officials who are addressed by their titles with the prefix "Mr," such as the civil service commissioners, the interstate commerce commissioners, the controller of the treasury, and it is always safe when in doubt to so address a man who holds a public office

With members of the house the simple "Mr" should be used, and not "Congressman," which is regarded as provincial, despite the fact that President Roosevelt is apt to use that form There are some members of the lower house of congress who like to be addressed as 'Congressman," and it is probably in deference to such preference that the president has adopted that expression The speaker of the house is always addressed as "Mr Speaker"

Army and navy circles also present no little confusion because of the conflict between official titles and social usage For instance, those who know never address socially a lieutenant by his title, despite the fact that he is so designated in the army register, and is so addressed by his brother officer when on official business He is simply "Mr. Smith," or whatever his name may be, and receives his title in the social world only when he reaches the grade of captain But, you may object, every one refers to and addresses the leader of the Marine Band as "Lieutenant Santelmann" Very true, and that is because Lieutenant Santelmann is not a commissioned officer. He receives the title by virtue of his position as leader of the Marine Band, which carries with it the rank of lieutenant, and therefore every officer, whether speaking socially or officially, is punctilious to use the title. And so, too, is the same care exercised by every officer, should he have occasion socially to speak to or communicate with an enlisted man of any arm of the military service, to address him by his rank alone, as "Sergeant," "Corporal," "Private"

Cat with Knowledge of Music.

At a meeting of a Washington short story club the other evening a young woman from the northeast section, whose mind is said to run to innovations, produced from her handbag a roll of manuscript written on the daintiest of ecru-tinted paper delicately perfumed with violet, and read her literary offering. It proved to be an account of the wonderful doings of her pet pussy cat, "Sweet Pea," as she had named the animal She read how she had trained the cat to sing "Auld Lang Syne," "Annie Laurie" and other venerable airs in the high falsetto voice for which the feline family is noted. Then the young woman related how, in the balmy summer nights, in the romantic moonlight, her pet cat would station itself on some neighboring fence and suddenly fill the neighborhood with strains of music instead of the usual caterwauling that is produced by marauding pussy cats and Toms.

FOUND OUT THE TROUBLE.

Waitress Discovered Jimmy's Peculiarity in Making Change.

Cash registers are doubtless watchdogs of private treasuries and joys forever to the happy clerks who play lightly upon the keys to "register the amount of your purchase," but there may come times in the best-regulated establishments when the vagaries of the human factor, without which the machine will not go, mix up its internal anatomy so that chaos reigns

In a Washington restaurant where tourists gather to snatch a passing bite between seeing sights and complain that the public buildings do not open until nine o'clock, thus compelling them to confine their observations to banking hours, a deep mystery has brooded for days There was a wide discrepancy between the receipts as stamped upon the roll in the cash register, and the amount of money found in the drawer at the close of business each day.

For a long time no solution of the puzzle could be found A young man, whose chief characteristic was his willingness, opened the restaurant at six every morning and ruled the roost alone But he was known to be honest

At last one of the waitresses, who arrived one morning just as the lonely young man was making change for one of the early customers, found out what was the matter

"Jimmy, your head is full of mud," was her classic adjuration "What on earth are you doing?"

"Making the change," replied the unperturbed James

And then the secret was out Jimmy, when he received a bank note or coin to change, rang up that amount on the register, without reference to what the customer was to pay, and let it go at that It was as simple as could be

Jimmy is still puzzling over the matter, for he knows that he put into the drawer the exact sum that he rang up, every time, so he cannot see where the kick comes in

No One to "Sit on the Lid."

"Usually, when the president goes away from the national capital for any length of time," remarked a stay-at-home official to a Washington star reporter, "he designates some member of the cabinet to 'sit on the lid,' or, in other words, to represent him in Washington in case of necessity That duty usually has been delegated to either Secretary Root or Secretary Taft, but has sometimes been assumed by other members of the cabinet For some unexplained reason it was not done this year, and it has happened that the highest official of the government on duty in the national capital for weeks at a time during the summer has been an assistant secretary to one of the executive departments.

"In the past it was extremely unusual for the president and all the members of his cabinet to be away from Washington at the same time for any extended period, but that condition existed, and has occurred frequently since the president went to Oyster Bay early in June last Neither Secretary Root, Secretary Taft nor any other member of the cabinet has been in Washington for any considerable stretch of time since that date, and it has happened that all of them have been away at the same time No embarrassment has resulted, however, as the president as well as all the cabinet ministers have remained in close communication with their representatives who remain in Washington throughout the summer, regardless of where they happened to be, so that really there was no occasion for anyone to hold down the lid for the president during the summer."

Supreme Court Enjoyed Joke

It is not safe for the average citizen to take liberties with the United States supreme court, but they have fun with each other, these grave and reverend dignitaries of the woolsack. The other day a case was pending in which a homesteader claimed damages against a railroad for the occupation of certain land It was pretty plain that the homesteader had waited ten years or so to claim his damages in order that the land might increase in value and permit him to make his claim larger. "Do you think it is equitable and just?' demanded Justice Brewer of the claimant's lawyer, "for your client to demand $1 000 from the railroad for this land when your client acquired the same by paying the merely nominal fees of a few dollars assessed by the government?" "But, if your honor please," retorted the lawyer, "the railroad paid nothing at all" "Ha, ha," laughed Justice Harlan, in a lusty voice, and then he deliberately leaned forward and grinned at Brewer. And Brewer grinned, too, at his own discomfiture. Harlan will be 75 next June Two of his passions are golf and chewing tobacco

No Time to Get Full Name.

Some of the new members of congress were getting acquainted with Washington society at the president's diplomatic reception Representative Edwards of Georgia was introduced to Mr Jonkheer Reinhardt de Marees van Swinderen. Representative Willets of New York came up and Mr. Edwards wanted to introduce him. "Would you mind giving me your name, sir? I could not hear it distinctly in this noise," said he to the minister from the Netherlands. "Jonkheer Reinhardt de—" Both Mr. Edwards and Mr. Willets were listening intently, but as it was a fast moving reception they did not get any more, nor did they see the minister any more.

WOMAN'S REALM

NEW SMALL TOQUE

IS TAKING THE PLACE OF THE VERY LARGE HAT.

Innovation of Fashion Will Be Welcomed by Many—Velvet Much Used in the Makeup of These Becoming Creations.

The very large hat is no longer dominating the millinery situation as it was several weeks ago The small hat of fur or velvet has now come upon the scene and is again considered proper for many occasions when the large hat is both uncomfortable and inappropriate This innovation of fashion has brought infinite relief to numbers of women to whom the large hat was extremely unbecoming Among these women who are not tall in proportion to their breadth of shoulder suffered most. The large hats which fashion forced upon everybody at the beginning of the season made these women look shorter than ever and were in many ways most distressing

The New Toque.

Especially are the small velvet toques enjoying a recurrence of popularity. They are exceedingly trig and becoming to most women. They are made in velvet to match velvet or broadcloth costumes. There is invariably a high trimming at the side, which greatly adds to the style of the toque. This high trimming is preferably not heavy, but is composed of aigrettes or some other light feather ornaments. Velvet is also used in loops having unfinished edges to make this high trimming. On many of these velvet toques there is a touch of gold in embroidery on the crown, or gold twisted cord with the velvet around the sides.

Negliges Made from Remnants.

The filmiest, loveliest kind of neglige may be fashioned at home at a quarter the price asked for the finished article in the store just now, when remnants of dainty fabrics are to be picked up at reduced prices. A length insufficient for a gown is enough for a neglige and the work of construction is quite simple.

The yoke and wide, long kimono sleeves could be in one piece fashioned from the material, first pintucked, then barred with narrow insertion, supporting an accordion-plaited body, trimmed or plain on the bottom

Messaline, India or marquisette could be used, and a raid on the ribbon remnant box will reveal pretty strands providing a finish.

BROADCLOTH NOW MUCH WORN.

French Dressmakers Use Remarkable Association of Colors.

Broadcloth is woven so delightfully that it is becoming more and more an all-the-year-round fabric. With the ascending vogue of the tunic, chiffon broadcloth promises to be in greater demand that ever, and forms the foundation for some remarkable color schemes with satin moire, merveilleux and chiffon taffetas, the other fabrics being used as borders and deep facings Time was when one would have stood aghast even at the thought of a combination of mauve and red, yet the French dressmakers associate them, and the color opportunities of the day are so great that one is fain to grant the medley the verdict of chic

Armand displays a remarkable creation in pinkish mauve chiffon broadcloth, showing the circular skirt faced with a deep band of rich, dark red satin moire, cut in scallops at the top The points of the scallops are far enough distant to permit the trespass of handsome silk soutache braid put on in decorative design.

CURLING THE BABY'S HAIR.

Brush Upward Instead of Downward, Is Good Rule to Adopt.

Where is the fond young mamma who doesn't hope and pray that her baby's hair will curl? It's fatal to any hope of good looks for the youngster to really curl it, but old nurses have a trick of inducing a soft curl on even the straightest little heads of hair They do it by brushing against the grain

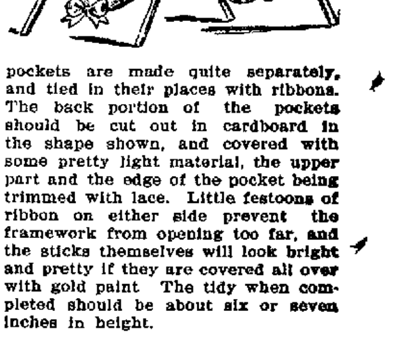
A baby's hair should always be brushed upward instead of downward, and as each lock is treated it should be given a little twist with the finger, this operation having particularly good and lasting effect when the hair is damp.

Persevered in daily, this will be found to work wonders, even in cases where the natural growth was perfectly straight, although for the first week or two before the hair has become accustomed to the upward trend the effect is rather wild.

NEAT LITTLE TOILET TIDY.

Dainty Trifle of Real Value for the Dressing Table.

We give a sketch of a pretty little toilet tidy for standing on the dressing table, that can easily be made by clever fingers. It consists of a framework of slender sticks of wood tied together with ribbons where they cross. Into the upper ends of the sticks pins with ornamental heads are run in to finish them off. The two pockets are made quite separately, and tied in their places with ribbons. The back portion of the pockets should be cut out in cardboard in the shape shown, and covered with some pretty light material, the upper part and the edge of the pocket being trimmed with lace. Little festoons of ribbon on either side prevent the framework from opening too far, and the sticks themselves will look bright and pretty if they are covered all over with gold paint The tidy when completed should be about six or seven inches in height.



BLUE WITH BLACK CHECK.

One of the new cloths in blue with a black distinct check is used for this suit. The trimming bands are plain blue, finished with blue velvet tabs and black silk tassels. The straps on the skirt extend over the shoulders and there is a folded velvet girdle with a large gilt buckle. All of it makes a striking effect.

Brace for Round Shoulders.

The simplest and probably the best shoulder brace is made of two loops of webbing connected with a straight piece of the same material. The arms slip through the loops and the straight piece passes across the back. The brace simply serves as a reminder of the stooping position and does not claim to hold one up. The feeling of energy and self-respect is better than any brace.

Lack of energy is shown plainly in the carriage There is something wrong with the mental attitude of a girl who allows her shoulders to droop. Round shoulders are more often due to indifference to one's appearance than to weakness or hard labor. The best way to correct the habit of stooping over is to straighten up every time you think of it, no matter how tired you may be.

The Empire Slant.

The empire influence is still perceptible in the shortening of the waist line at the back of many of the newest coat models, but on the whole the square stole lines that suggest the garments of ecclesiastical dignitaries are in the lead, and their flatness of effect is relieved by trimmings of braids and cords disposed in an endless variety of ways. Usually a wide braid emphasizes the lines of the garment and the narrower braids or cordings make the various curlycues.

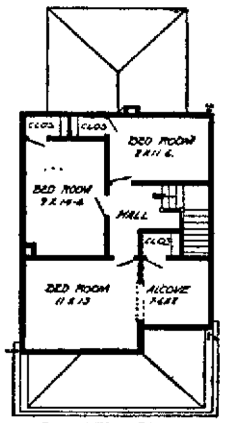
The fireplace being opposite the big window, makes a combination that for convenience and luxurious comfort is hard to beat



Second Floor Plan

One great advantage in this house is the large central chimney A chimney like this is worth a great deal in a dwelling There are four flues, one for the furnace, one for the kitchen range and one for each grate, and these grate flues are ventilators of the very best possible type They are at work night and day carrying out the foul air that is so objectionable in many houses Ventilation will receive more attention as the scientific treatment of tuberculosis and pneumonia becomes better understood. These diseases are caused by lack of fresh air, and they are cured, if cured at all, by causing the patients to breathe abundantly of air that comes directly from outdoors Sometimes severe cases have been cured by leaving the window in the sleeping room open day and night When people get to understand the value of fresh air we will have better ventilated houses. In the meantime, if we can smuggle in a couple of extra flues like this we may be able to save some lives without anybody knowing it.

The front hall is not larger than necessary It is shut off from out doors by a vestibule with double doors so it may be kept warm. Each bedroom has two clothes closets, something that is unusual in any house, but an improvement that will be appreciated.

Another splendid feature is the size of the bath room. One important consideration in arranging a bath room is to have it over or near the kitchen, so the same pipes that supply water to the tub and wash stand will supply the kitchen sink, and the same rule works right in regard to the waste pipes It not only effects a saving in first cost, but it is better for several reasons. The shorter the pipes are the better they will work, and the more condensed the space the easier they are kept from freezing in the winter time.

The kitchen is large enough, and it is both light and airy because of the windows on the side and the door in the end, and this door opens onto a very comfortable back porch that may be easily screened from flies and mosquitoes.

It is estimated that this house can be built where conditions are all favorable for about $2,000 without heater, plumbing, mantel or lighting fixtures.

Laugh and Be Glad.

Italian proverb: Laughter makes good blood.

NO RULE TO GUIDE

OFFICIAL TITLES A DIFFICULTY FOR THE UNINITIATED.

Changes Made in the Forms of Addressing the President and Others in High Position—"Congressman" Not Used.

"Should I address him as 'Your Excellency,' as 'Mr President' or as just 'President'?"

"I'm sure I don't know Just murmur 'President,' and I guess he won't know the difference"

This conversation, overheard at one of the White House receptions, is indicative of the difficulty with titles encountered by visitors to the national capital. Nor is there any printed guide to follow. These things must be learned from well-posted friends, or mistakes will be made

In ye olden times no one ever thought of addressing the chief executive of the United States less formally than as "Your Excellency," but that expression is now relegated to the list of things that were. "Mr President" is the correct form, both in speaking and writing. Mr. Roosevelt has even eliminated "The Executive Mansion" as the name of the president's official residence, and his stationery bears the simple inscription. "The White House"

It is not only with the title of the chief executive that the uninitiated find difficulty, for there are many forms to be learned. For instance, cabinet officers are not addressed as "Secretary Root," or "Secretary Garfield," but as "Mr. Secretary" On the other hand, senators are addressed by their titles, as "Senator Lodge," "Senator Hale" A few people prefix "Mr" saying "Mr Senator," but it is not considered as necessary, and by some is pronounced an affectation.

Polite usage requires, invariably, the prefix to the titles of members of the supreme court For instance, one addresses the chief justice as "Mr. Chief Justice," and the associate justices as "Mr Justice," although in making an introduction one would add the name, as: "Mr. Justice White"

The rule which applies to the president applies also to the vice-president and to foreign ministers, who are addressed as "Mr Minister," but in the case of ambassadors the form "Your Excellency," is used except where one is reasonably well acquainted, when the simpler "Mr Ambassador" is adopted, and in every instance one or the other of these terms is used instead of the diplomat's personal title of baron, count, or whatever it may be

Throughout the government service there are officials who are addressed by their titles with the prefix "Mr," such as the civil service commissioners, the interstate commerce commissioners, the controller of the treasury, and it is always safe when in doubt to so address a man who holds a public office

With members of the house the simple "Mr" should be used, and not "Congressman," which is regarded as provincial, despite the fact that President Roosevelt is apt to use that form There are some members of the lower house of congress who like to be addressed as 'Congressman," and it is probably in deference to such preference that the president has adopted that expression The speaker of the house is always addressed as "Mr Speaker"

Army and navy circles also present no little confusion because of the conflict between official titles and social usage For instance, those who know never address socially a lieutenant by his title, despite the fact that he is so designated in the army register, and is so addressed by his brother officer when on official business He is simply "Mr. Smith," or whatever his name may be, and receives his title in the social world only when he reaches the grade of captain But, you may object, every one refers to and addresses the leader of the Marine Band as "Lieutenant Santelmann" Very true, and that is because Lieutenant Santelmann is not a commissioned officer. He receives the title by virtue of his position as leader of the Marine Band, which carries with it the rank of lieutenant, and therefore every officer, whether speaking socially or officially, is punctilious to use the title. And so, too, is the same care exercised by every officer, should he have occasion socially to speak to or communicate with an enlisted man of any arm of the military service, to address him by his rank alone, as "Sergeant," "Corporal," "Private"

Cat with Knowledge of Music.

At a meeting of a Washington short story club the other evening a young woman from the northeast section, whose mind is said to run to innovations, produced from her handbag a roll of manuscript written on the daintiest of ecru-tinted paper delicately perfumed with violet, and read her literary offering. It proved to be an account of the wonderful doings of her pet pussy cat, "Sweet Pea," as she had named the animal She read how she had trained the cat to sing "Auld Lang Syne," "Annie Laurie" and other venerable airs in the high falsetto voice for which the feline family is noted. Then the young woman related how, in the balmy summer nights, in the romantic moonlight, her pet cat would station itself on some neighboring fence and suddenly fill the neighborhood with strains of music instead of the usual caterwauling that is produced by marauding pussy cats and Toms.

FOUND OUT THE TROUBLE.

Waitress Discovered Jimmy's Peculiarity in Making Change.

Cash registers are doubtless watchdogs of private treasuries and joys forever to the happy clerks who play lightly upon the keys to "register the amount of your purchase," but there may come times in the best-regulated establishments when the vagaries of the human factor, without which the machine will not go, mix up its internal anatomy so that chaos reigns

In a Washington restaurant where tourists gather to snatch a passing bite between seeing sights and complain that the public buildings do not open until nine o'clock, thus compelling them to confine their observations to banking hours, a deep mystery has brooded for days There was a wide discrepancy between the receipts as stamped upon the roll in the cash register, and the amount of money found in the drawer at the close of business each day.

For a long time no solution of the puzzle could be found A young man, whose chief characteristic was his willingness, opened the restaurant at six every morning and ruled the roost alone But he was known to be honest

At last one of the waitresses, who arrived one morning just as the lonely young man was making change for one of the early customers, found out what was the matter

"Jimmy, your head is full of mud," was her classic adjuration "What on earth are you doing?"

"Making the change," replied the unperturbed James

And then the secret was out Jimmy, when he received a bank note or coin to change, rang up that amount on the register, without reference to what the customer was to pay, and let it go at that It was as simple as could be

Jimmy is still puzzling over the matter, for he knows that he put into the drawer the exact sum that he rang up, every time, so he cannot see where the kick comes in

No One to "Sit on the Lid."

"Usually, when the president goes away from the national capital for any length of time," remarked a stay-at-home official to a Washington star reporter, "he designates some member of the cabinet to 'sit on the lid,' or, in other words, to represent him in Washington in case of necessity That duty usually has been delegated to either Secretary Root or Secretary Taft, but has sometimes been assumed by other members of the cabinet For some unexplained reason it was not done this year, and it has happened that the highest official of the government on duty in the national capital for weeks at a time during the summer has been an assistant secretary to one of the executive departments.

"In the past it was extremely unusual for the president and all the members of his cabinet to be away from Washington at the same time for any extended period, but that condition existed, and has occurred frequently since the president went to Oyster Bay early in June last Neither Secretary Root, Secretary Taft nor any other member of the cabinet has been in Washington for any considerable stretch of time since that date, and it has happened that all of them have been away at the same time No embarrassment has resulted, however, as the president as well as all the cabinet ministers have remained in close communication with their representatives who remain in Washington throughout the summer, regardless of where they happened to be, so that really there was no occasion for anyone to hold down the lid for the president during the summer."

Supreme Court Enjoyed Joke

It is not safe for the average citizen to take liberties with the United States supreme court, but they have fun with each other, these grave and reverend dignitaries of the woolsack. The other day a case was pending in which a homesteader claimed damages against a railroad for the occupation of certain land It was pretty plain that the homesteader had waited ten years or so to claim his damages in order that the land might increase in value and permit him to make his claim larger. "Do you think it is equitable and just?" demanded Justice Brewer of the claimant's lawyer, "for your client to demand $1 000 from the railroad for this land when your client acquired the same by paying the merely nominal fees of a few dollars assessed by the government?" "But, if your honor please," retorted the lawyer, "the railroad paid nothing at all" "Ha, ha," laughed Justice Harlan, in a lusty voice, and then he deliberately leaned forward and grinned at Brewer. And Brewer grinned, too, at his own discomfiture. Harlan will be 75 next June Two of his passions are golf and chewing tobacco

No Time to Get Full Name.

Some of the new members of congress were getting acquainted with Washington society at the president's diplomatic reception Representative Edwards of Georgia was introduced to Mr Jonkheer Reinhardt de Marees van Swinderen. Representative Willets of New York came up and Mr. Edwards wanted to introduce him. "Would you mind giving me your name, sir? I could not hear it distinctly in this noise," said he to the minister from the Netherlands. "Jonkheer Reinhardt de—" Both Mr. Edwards and Mr. Willets were listening intently, but as it was a fast moving reception they did not get any more, nor did they see the minister any more.

WOMAN'S REALM

NEW SMALL TOQUE

IS TAKING THE PLACE OF THE VERY LARGE HAT.

Innovation of Fashion Will Be Welcomed by Many—Velvet Much Used in the Makeup of These Becoming Creations.

The very large hat is no longer dominating the millinery situation as it was several weeks ago The small hat of fur or velvet has now come upon the scene and is again considered proper for many occasions when the large hat is both uncomfortable and inappropriate This innovation of fashion has brought infinite relief to numbers of women to whom the large hat was extremely unbecoming Among these women who are not tall in proportion to their breadth of shoulder suffered most. The large hats which fashion forced upon everybody at the beginning of the season made these women look shorter than ever and were in many ways most distressing

The New Toque.

Especially are the small velvet toques enjoying a recurrence of popularity. They are exceedingly trig and becoming to most women. They are made in velvet to match velvet or broadcloth costumes. There is invariably a high trimming at the side, which greatly adds to the style of the toque. This high trimming is preferably not heavy, but is composed of aigrettes or some other light feather ornaments. Velvet is also used in loops having unfinished edges to make this high trimming. On many of these velvet toques there is a touch of gold in embroidery on the crown, or gold twisted cord with the velvet around the sides.

Negliges Made from Remnants.

The filmiest, loveliest kind of neglige may be fashioned at home at a quarter the price asked for the finished article in the store just now, when remnants of dainty fabrics are to be picked up at reduced prices. A length insufficient for a gown is enough for a neglige and the work of construction is quite simple.

The yoke and wide, long kimono sleeves could be in one piece fashioned from the material, first pin-tucked, then barred with narrow insertion, supporting an accordion-plaited body, trimmed or plain on the bottom

Messaline, India or marquisette could be used, and a raid on the ribbon remnant box will reveal pretty strands providing a finish.

BROADCLOTH NOW MUCH WORN.

French Dressmakers Use Remarkable Association of Colors.

Broadcloth is woven so delightfully that it is becoming more and more an all-the-year-round fabric. With the ascending vogue of the tunic, chiffon broadcloth promises to be in greater demand that ever, and forms the foundation for some remarkable color schemes with satin moire, mervellieux and chiffon taffetas, the other fabrics being used as borders and deep facings Time was when one would have stood aghast even at the thought of a combination of mauve and red, yet the French dressmakers associate them, and the color opportunities of the day are so great that one is fain to grant the medley the verdict of chic

Armand displays a remarkable creation in pinkish mauve chiffon broadcloth, showing the circular skirt faced with a deep band of rich, dark red satin moire, cut in scallops at the top The points of the scallops are far enough distant to permit the trespass of handsome silk soutache braid put on in decorative design.

CURLING THE BABY'S HAIR.

Brush Upward Instead of Downward, Is Good Rule to Adopt.

Where is the fond young mamma who doesn't hope and pray that her baby's hair will curl? It's fatal to any hope of good looks for the youngster to really curl it, but old nurses have a trick of inducing a soft curl on even the straightest little heads of hair They do it by brushing against the grain

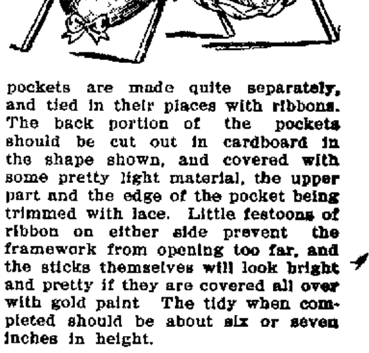
A baby's hair should always be brushed upward instead of downward, and as each lock is treated it should be given a little twist with the finger, this operation having particularly good and lasting effect when the hair is damp.

Persevered in daily, this will be found to work wonders, even in cases where the natural growth was perfectly straight, although for the first week or two before the hair has become accustomed to the upward trend the effect is rather wild.

NEAT LITTLE TOILET TIDY.

Dainty Trifle of Real Value for the Dressing Table.

We give a sketch of a pretty little toilet tidy for standing on the dressing table, that can easily be made by clever fingers. It consists of a framework of slender sticks of wood tied together with ribbons where they cross. Into the upper ends of the sticks pins with ornamental heads are run in to finish them off. The two pockets are made quite separately, and tied in their places with ribbons. The back portion of the pockets should be cut out in cardboard in the shape shown, and covered with some pretty light material, the upper part and the edge of the pocket being trimmed with lace. Little festoons of ribbon on either side prevent the framework from opening too far, and the sticks themselves will look bright and pretty if they are covered all over with gold paint The tidy when completed should be about six or seven inches in height.



BLUE WITH BLACK CHECK.

One of the new cloths in blue with a black distinct check is used for this suit. The trimming bands are plain blue, finished with blue velvet tabs and black silk tassels. The straps on the skirt extend over the shoulders and there is a folded velvet girdle with a large gilt buckle. All of it makes a striking effect.

Brace for Round Shoulders.

The simplest and probably the best shoulder brace is made of two loops of webbing connected with a straight piece of the same material. The arms slip through the loops and the straight piece passes across the back. The brace simply serves as a reminder of the stooping position and does not claim to hold one up. The feeling of energy and self-respect is better than any brace.

Lack of energy is shown plainly in the carriage There is something wrong with the mental attitude of a girl who allows her shoulders to droop. Round shoulders are more often due to indifference to one's appearance than to weakness or hard labor. The best way to correct the habit of stooping over is to straighten up every time you think of it, no matter how tired you may be.

The Empire Slant.

The empire influence is still perceptible in the shortening of the waist line at the back of many of the newest coat models, but on the whole the square stole lines that suggest the garments of ecclesiastical dignitaries are in the lead, and their flatness of effect is relieved by trimmings of braids and cords disposed in an endless variety of ways. Usually a wide braid emphasizes the lines of the garment and the narrower braids or cordings make the various curlycues.
